COTTAGES AT BRONTE BEACH were ripped and torn by the Saturday night gales and here the home of Fred Sawyer is seen ripped into the water which swirls around it. All day yesterday owners worked at salvaging what was left after storm, went in the history of the community

DOREEN SAWYER rescues furnishings from the cottage through a window. "We have been here 14 years," said Sawyer, "and have never seen the like of this." His cottage looked like a house boat

CARTING AWAY bedding from cottages are Frank Forster and Fred Sawyer. "When we first came to Bronte, we had about 150 feet of sandy beach in front of cottage," said Sawyer. "It dwindled from year to year."

TONG WOULD HAVE BEEN LIFETIME CRIPPLE--DOCTORS

HEATHERANNE HAYWARD helps his father, Fred Hayward, salvage some furnishings through window which had to be used as waves had smashed the front of the cottage and was spilling water into living room

ANOTHER COTTAGE at Bronte is seen with its front entirely smashed as Frances Forster looks over wreckage. Discouraged residents didn't know what to do or where to go with their homes, possessions, destroyed by gales
